+ TROUBLE

WE'VE LOST THAT LOVING FEELING

My wife and I have been married for five years and we have two children. Nine months ago, she got upset with me and said that she wouldn't have sex, and that I shouldn't touch her in any way. Do I resort to clubbing and dragging, Neanderthal style? Seriously though, what can I do?

GEOFF, VIA FHM.COM.AU

Wow, Geoff, that sounds big. The caveman approach might be a little bit full on. You don't mention why she got upset. Did you have an argument and she decided to withhold sex as punishment? If so, your marriage has deeper issues that need to be resolved before intimacy can be restored. Sit down with her and try to work it out calmly. If an argument isn't the source of the problem, find out what is. In a non-accusatory way, ask her why she doesn't want to have sex. Is it lack of desire? Fear of pregnancy? If these steps don't work, seek therapy for the two of you. Try Relationships Australia at relationships.com.au.

HERE COMES YOUR (EXTRA) MAN

+ I often fantasise about watching my girlfriend with another guy. I've alluded to the subject without being too specific, but is there a way I can broach the topic without upsetting her? I don't want to hurt my girl's feelings, but our love life really could do with a bit of spice.

DAVID, VIA EMAIL

Your girl's reaction will depend more on her sexual desires than on the way you bring it up. If she's generally subdued in bed, chances are she won't be keen. But if you think there's a chance she'll be into it, start up a conversation about fantasies and slowly work your way up to this one. Just keep in mind that even if her reaction is positive, it's a big step from talking about it to actually going through with it. Introducing a third party is a delicate issue: are you sure you won't feel jealous or resentful after the fact? Think about it carefully; sometimes fantasies are better off staying in the imagination.

WHAT THE FUNK?

I was recently playing around with my partner of 13 months - we are soon to be married - and I received a bit of a shock when I noticed her front bum smelled like the back one. We don't indulge in anal sex, so is this normal?

ANONYMOUS

There are several possible causes for her funky smell. Synthetic underwear, pantyhose, tights and exercise clothes that don't allow air to circulate in that area can all cause a bad smell. She might just need to wash before you put your face down there, so why don't you suggest a fun foreplay shower next time? If she still doesn't smell fresh it might be a vaginal infection, which could have several different causes. In that case you should mention it to her gently and get her to consult her doctor as soon as possible. The smell should then go away once the infection is treated. FHM
